ored public men in our country, one o Pennsylvania's most eminent sons, the present Senator and then Attorney Gen begun."

This frank and hearty declaration from the President himself settles the relations of Senator Knox to the great movement for national control and regu lation. If that is the paramount ques tion of the day, as is generally believed if the Presidential election is to turn on the support of the Roosevelt policies on this subject and their maintenance along practical lines, then the utterance of the President and the unmatched record of Senator Knox made him the logical successor. In some quarters he has been heedlessly spoken of as reactionary because he is rational. This chapter is the conclusive answer. Reaction is reversal. It comes from opposition. No man is reactionary as regards his own fixed and settled principles. The principles of the Roosevelt policies are the principles of Senator Knox. He formu lated them and framed their legal bounds, and he thoroughly believes in their fundamental object of public justice and corporate regulation.

Senator Knox has not only the con victions but the attributes to make a strong President for these times and these demands. He was a vigorous and successful administrator in his Department. He worked quietly but accomplished great results. He has poise, reflection and judgment. He has the judicial temperament and balance. Since the retirement of Senator Spooner he has been advanced to the place of that very able leader and is recognized as the weightiest man in the Senate for large constitutional and legal discussion. He has every fitness for President, and the strength of his position for this emergency must as it comes to be realized more and more impress the country.

CHICAGO, Jan. 2 .- A National Bureau of Health for the regulation of the People's Physical Welfare, planned by the leading specialists of the United velt, may take fta place in the Federal departments of the government within the year, through the efforts of the nent of Science.

The ultimate reduction of the death the aim of the new governmental board, and it is deemed a promise not impos- feet. sible of fulfillment.

Plans for the bureau were announced yesterday at the University of Chicago by Professor Irving Fisher, the Yale University economist and chairman of the committee of 100 distinguished scientists who have had charge of the undertaking. The membership of the committee includes leaders in the various branches of the medical and social sciences for the important universities and other centers of the country.

The educators have been assured that the first steps in the organization of the health bureau will be taken at the present session of Congress, and the president has sent his personal encouragement and indorsement to the committee. According to Professor Fisher, it is believed probable that President
